The (new) Italian Communist Party presents its Manifesto Program to world Communists, parties and organizations of the communist movement. Here the (n)PCI exposes its balance of the more than 150 years old history of the international communist movement, its analysis of the international situation, the general line and the strategy leading it in its work for making Italy a new socialist country and so contributing to the second wave of proletarian revolution advancing all over the world.

The Revolutionary Protracted People's War (RPPW) is the strategy of the (n)PCI. In the Manifesto Program the Party distinguishes between the universal laws of RPPW and the particular ones, valid for the socialist revolution in Italy and in other imperialist countries.

The eighth discriminating factor

*The Maoism as the third higher stage of communist thought, after Marxism and Leninism.
The new communist parties must be Marxist-Leninist-Maoist, and not only Marxist-Leninist.*

The five main contributions of Maoism to communist thought

1. The long lasting revolutionary popular war

Which way must we communist follow in the imperialist countries in order to carry out the working class to establish the proletarian dictatorship, begin the socialist phase of transformation of the society and contribute to the second wave of the proletarian revolution?

2. The new democracy revolutions

The communist strategy in the colonial and semi colonial countries oppressed by imperialism.

3. The class' struggle in the socialist society

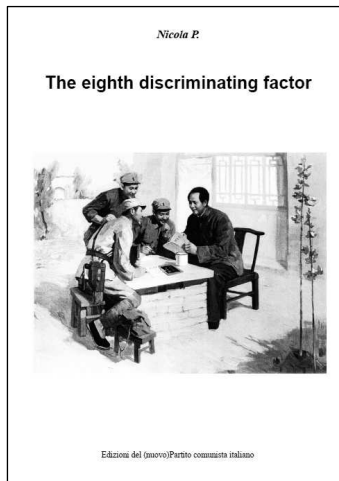

The historical contributions of the socialist countries built during the first wave of the proletarian revolution and the teachings of their experience.

4. The mass line

The mass line as principal method of work and direction of every communist party.

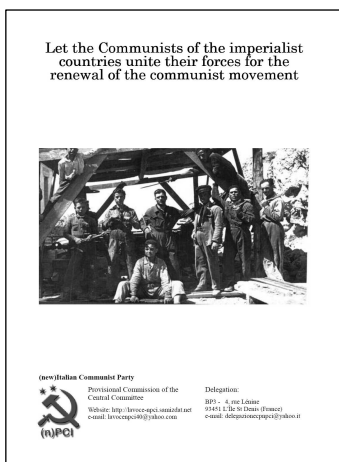

5. The struggle between the two lines in the communist party

The struggle between the two lines in the party as principle of the communist party's development and defense against the bourgeoisie's influence.

Let the Communists of the imperialist countries unite their forces for the renewal of the communist movement

The present conditions quite confirm Marxist analysis of capitalist mode of production. They create a context extremely favourable for socialist revolution. However, in order to avail themselves of this favourable context, Communists have to break with dogmatism, which prevents them from seeing the new forms of the old contradictions of capitalism, and with economism, which reduces Communists to be mainly the most resolute and farsighted animators and leaders of workers' and popular masses' claiming struggles.
